Hem's new home, in the centre of Stockholm, looks out over the beautiful Vasaparken. For an interior design store, the location next to the brass-clad Sven Harrys art museum, couldn't have been better. In the centre of the store, a five-metre dark green acoustic wall reflects the nature outside, creating a natural sound divide in an open plan space with glass and polished concrete walls.

As the space serves as Hem's main office, and their showroom, creating a functional, attractive indoor environment was a must. Wood wool acoustic panels create the perfect backdrop for Hem's Scandinavian designs. The dark green reflects their brand identity and creates a calm feeling throughout the showroom.
